Consumer insight

The microwave oven has become thoroughly entrenched in everyday life in the U.S. In fact, it is the most used appliance for in-home meals at lunchtime, and its use is growing at breakfast and dinner occasions too. Microwaveable foods saw a four percent increase in share of new product launches and now account for 12% of total launches. From 2006 to 2010 microwaveable products represented more than a quarter of all global new item launches as consumers sought ways to make meal preparation quick and easy in their fast-paced lives.
