Consumer insight

Convenience still trumps all other trends when it comes to meal preparation. Evidence of this is the growing number of packaging claims for convenience, which rose 69% from 2007 to 2010. Market demands of time-starved consumers who frequently need to eat short, quick, on-the-go meals are driving the convenience factor. This hunger for convenience may explain why almost one-quarter of all dinners eaten last year were frozen.

Product development partners

Whether you're looking to develop a new product, match an existing one or create a line extension, we're ready to support you with our team of talented technical service experts in consumer insights, culinology, food science, sensory science, food safety and process engineering.
